

2018 busiest year ever for U.S. national domestic violence hotline

24 June 2019

emotional and verbal abuse; 60 percent said they were victims of physical abuse; 24 percent said they were experiencing financial abuse; 15 percent reported digital abuse such as constant texting, GPS stalking, and unauthorized home surveillance; and 11 percent said they were victims of sexual abuse, NBC News reported.

More information: NBC News Article

Copyright © 2019 HealthDay. All rights reserved.

(HealthDay)—The U.S. National Domestic Violence Hotline had its busiest year ever in 2018, receiving 573,670 calls, texts, and online chats, a 36 percent increase from 2017.

Factors in the rise include increased awareness due to the #MeToo movement that began 2017, and allegations of domestic violence against high-profile people such as R&B singer R. Kelly and former White House staff secretary Rob Porter, hotline CEO Katie Ray-Jones told NBC News. Both men have denied the allegations.

"I wouldn't necessarily say that there's more domestic violence happening," Ray-Jones told NBC News. "I think what is happening is, there's a lot of discourse around the complexities around domestic violence now."

Since 1996, the hotline has provided 24-hour, year-round support for people affected by domestic violence. In 2018, 88 percent of people who contacted the hotline reported some form of

APA citation: 2018 busiest year ever for U.S. national domestic violence hotline (2019, June 24)
retrieved 16 June 2022 from <https://medicalxpress.com/news/2019-06-busiest-year-national-domestic-violence.html>

This document is subject to copyright. Apart from any fair dealing for the purpose of private study or research, no part may be reproduced without the written permission. The content is provided for information purposes only.