

COVID-19 vaccine distribution would begin within 24 hours after approval

September 18 2020

(HealthDay)—Distribution of a COVID-19 vaccine in the United States would begin within 24 hours of its approval or emergency use authorization, and the plan is that no American will have to "pay a single dime" out of their own pocket for the vaccine, federal officials said Thursday.

The officials with Operation Warp Speed—the multiagency effort to get a COVID-19 vaccine to Americans—also said it is not clear when a vaccine might be available, even though President Donald Trump keeps claiming that one could be ready before the election on Nov. 3, The New York Times reported.

"We're dealing in a world of great uncertainty. We don't know the timing of when we'll have a vaccine, we don't know the quantities, we don't know the efficacy of those vaccines," said Paul Mango, the deputy chief of staff for policy at the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services.

"This is a really quite extraordinary, logistically complex undertaking, and [there are] a lot of uncertainties right now," Mango told The Times. "I think the message we want you to leave with is, we are prepared for all of those uncertainties."

More information: The New York Times Article

Copyright © 2020 HealthDay. All rights reserved.

Citation: COVID-19 vaccine distribution would begin within 24 hours after approval (2020, September 18) retrieved 20 September 2024 from <https://medicalxpress.com/news/2020-09-covid-vaccine-hours.html>

This document is subject to copyright. Apart from any fair dealing for the purpose of private study or research, no part may be reproduced without the written permission. The content is provided for information purposes only.